Embassy of Denmark
American-Danish
Business Council

Membership overview

About the Council

The American-Danish Business Council is a non-profit association that strengthens trade and investment between Denmark and the United States. Founded in 2001, the Council is chaired by the Ambassador of Denmark to the United States and run from the Royal Danish Embassy in Washington, D.C. It brings together leading Danish and American companies with policymakers and government representatives.

Why join

- Members are the Embassy's closest business partners, with direct access to the Ambassador and the Embassy's advisers and network in the United States and Denmark.
- A senior-level network of decision-makers across the Danish-American business community.
- Strategic dialogue on policy, market developments and the issues shaping trade and investment between the two countries.
- Introductions that can lead to partnerships, investment and new business.
- Visibility among influential stakeholders and fellow members.

Activities

Executive roundtables and dinners at the Ambassador's residence, engagement with members of Congress and their staff on Capitol Hill, meetings and receptions around high-level visits from Denmark, and annual events including Constitution Day, Flag Day, the Member Dinner and the Christmas Reception.
